Vibrating equipment specialist Joest Kwatani's two year partnership with leading solids control equipment and screens provider, Derrick Solutions International Africa was officially announced today at Electra Mining. A further announcement is that the company will from now on be known as Kwatani.

Kwatani, which means 'tonnage' in Swahili, is a fitting name for the company since Kwatani has a 39-year record of designing and supplying high-quality customised vibrating equipment.

Kim Schoepflin, managing director of Kwatani says the company's sales and support functions will be undertaken in partnership with Derrick Solutions International Africa which, like Kwatani, has dedicated as much as 40% of its engineering skills to research and development.
